Ionian, Ionic, pertaining to the Iones, the name of one of the four great divisions of the Ancient Hellenes or Greeks who inhabited Attica, the Ionian Islands of the Ægean, and colonies on the west coast of Asia Minor in the Classical age of Greece. The (a) Ionic order of architecture was especially distinguished by the graceful volutes of the capital. The (b) Ionian mode in Music, was characterised in the diatonic genus by a scale formed of two disjunct tetrachords separated by a whole tone, like our major scale, the highest note of the tetrachords being a semitone higher than in the Dorian The (c) Ionic dialects (of Asia Minor and the Ionian islands) were distinguished chiefly by keeping consecutive vowels uncontracted and changing \bar{a} into η freely. The (d) Ionic metre consisted of feet made up of a pair of long syllables followed by (Ionic a mājōre) or preceded by (Ionic a minore) a pair of short syllables, ----, ----

*je ne sais quoi, je ne sçais quoi, phr.: Fr.: an 'I know not what', an inexpressible or indescribable something; also, as adj., indescribable.

1676 but the sight of you did stir in me a strange Je ne scai quoi towards you: Shadwell, Virtuoso, iii, p. 38. 1696 Some sweet alluring Jen Scay Quoy, | Some pleasing pretty tickling Toy: D'Urfey, Don Quix., Pt. III. iv.

p. 38. 1722 Upon the whole this Picture has a certain je ne sçay quoy that puts it on a level almost with any, hardly excepting the Transfiguration: Richardson, Statues, &c., in Italy, p. 34. bef. 1733 Now this Word Post has a je ne sçais quoi Sound of deep design: R. North, Examen, III. viii. 14, p. 592 (1740). 1737 whose charms result rather from a certain air and je ne sais quoi in their whole composition, than from any dignity of figure, or symmetry of features: Lord Chestersled, in Common Sense, No. 4, Misc. Wks., Vol. I. No. 37, p. 212 (1774). 1754 there was a je ne scai quoy in their behaviour to-day: SMOLLETT, Ferd Ct. Fathom, ch. Mi. Wks., Vol. IV. p. 228 (1817). 1758 Se-ne-scai-quoy, though of French extraction, we shall not presume to find fault with, because it has been naturalized and productive of infinite good in England: Ann Reg., I. Humble Remonstrance, &c., p. 374/1. 1823 Still there was something wanting, as I've said— | That undefinable "Yene sçais quoi": Byron, Don Yuan, Xiv. lxxii.

*jehad, sb.: Arab. jihād: a sacred war of Mohammedans against infidels.

1883 A jehad was preached, some help was received from Morocco: Sat. Rev., Vol. 55, p. 688. 1887 It is hardly correct to speak of the [Mohammedan] propaganda as a "peaceful" movement, for something is done by the Jihad: Athenaum, Aug. 27, p 268/2.

Jehennum. See Gehenna.

*Jehovah (= 2 =): Eng. and Late Lat. form of Heb. fehōvāh, a version of Jahveh, the unutterable name of the Supreme Being, with the vowels of Adonai substituted for the original. The origin and etymological meaning of the name are unknown. The Italian deity Jove (Jupiter) is occasionally confused with Jehovah (see quot. 1616).

1611 I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them: Bible, Exod, vi. 3. 1616 Why doth remorse of conscience, or dispaire, | Afflict thee thus? This is enough to prove | (Were there no more) an Elohim, a love: R. C., Times' Whistle, 1 112, p. 7(1871)

*Jehu, a captain of the host who rebelled against and slew Joram, king of Israel, and who caused Jezebel, the king's mother (see Jezebel), to be slain; from 2 Kings, ix. 20, "the driving is like the driving of Jehu, the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously", the name Jehu stands for one who drives fast, and even for a coachman.

1601. What Jesabeling of her [Elizabeth] have I heard them use? what questioning whether yet no Jehu have subdued her? A. C., Answ to Let. of a Jecusted Cent., p. 80. 1660 Now the restor'd Runns, Jehu-like, drives on: J. C[ROUCH], Return of Chas. II, p. 9. 1682 But this new Jehu spurs the hot-mouthed horse: DRYDEN, Medal, 119. bef. 1716 those Pedagogical John's, those School-drivers: South, Serm., Vol. v. p. 26(1727). 1742 Het thought he ne'er could go too far. | So Jehu-like rode whip and spur: W. W. Wilkins' Polit. Bal., Vol. 11. p. 286 (1860). 1762 had driven him all the day before (Jehu-like), and that he had neither corn nor hay: Sterne, Lett., Wks., p. 751/1 (1830). p. 751/1 (1839).
